Newman's Own Foundation announces $1million in empowerment grants

The inspirational work of 23 Australians has been recognised by Newman's Own Foundation, which announced charitable grants totalling $1million today.

Registered charities were invited to nominate individuals from within their organisations whose work has empowered others to overcome extraordinary adverse circumstances, and/or provide equal access to human rights and contribute to the development of a civil society.

The Foundation's Australian advisor Dimity Pinto said the nominations were open to anyone who had demonstrated the effort to go that extra distance to help others transform their lives.

"Narrowing down the applications to the final 23 nominees and their projects was extremely challenging," said Pinto. "We were overwhelmed by the heartfelt and inspirational stories from charitable organisations around Australia with the nominees ranging from founders of charities, to case workers and even part time volunteers."

President and CEO of Newman's Own Foundation, Robert Forrester said all of the charity nominees follow in the footsteps of Paul Newman as evidenced through their determination to make a difference to the underserved and/or disadvantaged in our communities.

"Paul Newman believed we all have the opportunity to improve the lives of others and this year we are seeking individuals from within charitable organisations who have demonstrated a ongoing commitment to empowering those less fortunate," said Forrester.
